Lots of wheat held back

Washington (AP) — American farmers are holding record amounts of wheat off the market, apparently in an effort to force up prices. The Agriculture Department reported that on Oct. 1, with wheat prices 30% below a year earlier, farmers were holding 328 million bushels, even more than in the months immediately before the massive grain sales to the Soviet Union in the summer of 1972. The report on grain inventories could indicate higher food prices.

Medicaid rule hit

New York (UPI) — A federal judge Friday ruled that a new law prohibiting the use of Medicaid money for abortions is unconstitutional because it discriminates against poor women. U.S. District Judge John F. Dooling directed the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to resume the payments.

It went under the carpet

North Little Rock, Ark. (AP) — Two workers ripped up an old carpet at a North Little Rock apartment and found nearly $600 stashed away. But their little fortune didn't last — a bank told the men the $20 bills were counterfeit.

The bogus bills were turned over to police.

B52s to watch

Washington (UPI) — U.S. commanders plan to start using the B52 strategic bomber fleet to watch Russian naval movements in the Indian Ocean, an Air Force official said.

The program would involve the first regular flights of the giant bombers over the strategic Indian Ocean. With a maximum range of about 10,000 miles, they are considered ideally suited for the large distances involved.

Executions fewer, nearer

Bangkok, Thailand (UPI) — It is better now in Cambodia, the refugees say. There are fewer executions by the Communist authorities and the killing is nearer. In the first year after the takeover by Khmer Rouge Communists on April 17, 1975, Cambodian refugees who fled to Thailand described their former homeland as a police state of fear and poverty.

The allegations of the refugees have been backed up by missionaries and diplomatic and news sources who estimate that 600,000 to one million of the more than seven million Cambodians have been executed under Communist rule.

Still 30 minutes

(c) New York Times
New York — In a statement issued Friday that disarmed the rival networks and left their news chiefs dejected, NBC announced that it had ceased considering the possibility of expanding the early evening newscast from 30 minutes to one hour on weeknights.

Cut to a trickle ...

Urbana, Ill. (AP) — A state of emergency was declared in this central Illinois community of 800 Friday after muskrats burrowed holes in an earthen reservoir and cut the town's water supply to a trickle.

It's been up and down for MU this year, but the ups have included wins over some top teams

Coaches' Capsules

Missouri's Al Onofrio:

"Nebraska is very versatile offensively, and a highly effective football team. They have a methodical offense and execute very well. Vince Ferragamo looks much better this year. He is doing more things than in the past, but he did a fine job against us last year."

Nebraska's Tom Osborne:

"We figure we are going to see Missouri at its best and when Missouri is at its best it can beat anybody in the nation. We've seen evidence of that. At the start of the year, some people said Missouri would prove to be the best offensive team in the Big Eight and we'd like to prove those people wrong."

Poll: Score Carter 2, Ford 1

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — President Ford and Jimmy Carter warily argued issues ranging from abortion and civil rights to the economy and their own campaign tactics Friday night, then concluded their nationally-television debates the way they began — each claiming that he is a leader and the other a pretender.

The first signal of voter reaction indicated that Democrat Carter had been judged the victor in the rubber match of three presidential campaign debates.

The candidates' final summations in Williamsburg went to the point raised in opening statements in their first debate in Philadelphia: the qualifications of the Republican President and of the Democratic challenger to lead the nation for the next four years.

Ford said he had observed presidents, and sometimes differed with them, during his 25 years in Congress. "For the last two years, I've been the President, and I have found from experience that it's much more difficult to make those decisions than it is to second guess them," he said.

The President said the nation is healed after a troubled time of Watergate and war, and "the American people are moving again, and moving in the right direction."

But Carter said otherwise. He said Ford's administration has not provided national leadership.

"Mr. Ford is a good and decent man, but he's been in office now for more than 800 days. I'd like to ask the American people what's been accomplished," Carter said.

He contrasted his experience, in local and state government, in the Navy, and as a nuclear engineer, to Ford's in Congress. "I believe the American people are ready for a change in Washington," he said.

Through much of the 90-minute debate at Phi Beta Kappa Hall on the campus of The College of William and Mary, Ford and Carter avoided hard-line attacks on each other.

So there was an air of studied politeness, without the stern criticism Ford sounded in Philadelphia, or the sardonic tones Carter adopted during their second debate in San Francisco.

But there were slaps, each at the other. Carter said shame after Ford boasted of the administration's economic record. Ford said Carter has slipped in the public opinion polls — which still show him leading — because of inconsistency about the issues.

A telephone poll of 355 viewers, conducted by Burns Roper for the Public Broadcasting System, said 40 per cent thought Carter had won the debate, while 29 per cent judged Ford the victor. The rest called it a draw or said they had no opinion.

That compared with surveys that had rated Ford the winner of the first debate, Carter of the second.

Among the new items on the debaters' agenda were these:

CAMPAIGN The candidates were asked whether a low-road campaign was turning off voters. Carter acknowledged "I've made some mistakes" during the race for the White House. He said his interview with Playboy, which included comments on lust and adultery in explicit language, was one of them. "In retrospect, from hindsight, I would not have given that interview if I had it to do over again," he said.

Ford said candidates inevitably use "rather graphic language, and I'm guilty of that." He said he will campaign during the next 10 days so as to stimulate voter participation in the Nov. 2 election.

ABORTION Ford repeated his support for a constitutional amendment that would give the states authority to ban abortion.

Carter said he opposes any amendment of the Constitution to deal with transient problems, and therefore does not favor an anti-abortion amendment although "I'm strongly against abortion."

GUN CONTROL Carter said he favors handgun registration to prohibit ownership by convicted criminals or persons proven incompetent to own a gun. He said those should be the only purposes and handguns the only weapons covered.

Ford said registration has not been a successful deterrent to crime. He said he opposes it, and favors legislation to make sure that people who use guns in committing crimes go to jail. He noted that the administration does advocate a ban on small, cheap handguns called Saturday night specials.

CIVIL RIGHTS Ford said he was proud of the administration's record in providing opportunities and promoting equality for blacks and other minorities. "I believe on the record that this administration has been responsive and we've carried out the law to the letter," he said.

"The description just made of this administration's record is hard to recognize," Carter countered. He said government programs have been inefficient, and in some cases, including housing, corrupt, leading to despair and a lack of hope among minorities.

She's often in a whirl

Kim Grabowski's cartwheels command an audience as great as the Memorial Stadium crowd on a football Saturday.

That's because she tumbles and spins along the sidelines in support of the Cornhuskers on the playing field. And at half-time she leaps and whirls dozens of yards downfield to welcome the Big Red players back for the third quarter of play.

For 14-year-old Kim, gymnastics is always a thrill whether it's a three-hour practice session in a sweat-filled gymnasium or at a competitive event before scrutinizing crowds.

Tumbling for half her life now, Kim is in her third year of competition with the Nebraska School of Gymnastics, a group who train with University of Nebraska-Lincoln gymnastics coaches Francis Allen and Judy Schalk.

For Kim, gymnastics means three- to four-hour workouts six days a week, plus game-time tumbling. Several evenings she assists her coach with classes for less-advanced youngsters.

Kim's formula for improving her moves? — "I do things over and over again."

Gymnastics has become much harder for her now that she's competing. "Years ago we worked on tricks just to do them."

Kim's gymnastics meets have taken her around the country. For the nationals, she headed to Eugene, Ore. and for the junior olympics it was north to Minnesota.

While gymnastics provides both challenge and satisfaction, Kim confides that she likes to do things at school and with school friends and "sometimes gymnastics takes me away from that."

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Grabowski, 6100 Vine, Apt. 70, Kim has broken her arm just "goofing around" with tricks. She's had her fair share of bumps and bruises as well. But for the next few weeks, and perhaps even months, Kim will be wearing a brace to correct a back problem.

Wilken speaks on own behalf

By Michael Holmes

Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Nebraska City — Duane Wilken taking the witness stand in his own defense Friday, said his wife died following a "furious struggle" the two had in their Unadilla cafe.

For an hour and 40 minutes Wilken described marital problems the couple encountered the fight which occurred April 10 and his wife Sharon's death.

Wilken has pleaded innocent to a charge of second-degree murder. Mrs. Wilken allegedly was killed by a blow to the head April 10, her body burned and buried in the garden of the couple's home.

Following his two sons to the witness stand, Wilken described the fatal struggle and the events leading to it.

He said his wife left him and the boys in early March, although continuing to operate the cafe with him.

She was seeing another man, Wilken said. On April 9, she heard 11-year-old Dean Wilken sing an unflattering song about his mother and the other man, and Mrs. Wilken "was really steaming," Wilken said.

On April 10, he said he and his wife were alone in the cafe when they began to exchange "loud words."

"The next thing I knew," Wilken told the jury, "I turned around and here comes this skinned at me, over her head."

"She came at me with it. I ducked. It caught me in the middle of my back. I can't remember how many times she hit me."

He said the two struggled for control of the skillet. "It was furious. We were really going at it. She got hit... in the front of her head. She was bleeding."

He said he then pulled away, stumbled, turned around and saw Sharon Wilken on the cafe floor. He said he heard a "big thud" as she fell near a kitchen counter.

Wilken said he tried to revive his wife, giving her mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, but could find no pulse.

I started shaking like a leaf I broke out into a sweat," he testified. "I thought 'Oh no what's happened? How's this going to look?'

Wilken locked the cafe, sat for several minutes then dragged the body into a back room.

Did you think about calling the police?" asked chief defense attorney Richard Hoch.

"Yes," Wilken replied, adding "I knew how it would look. Everybody (in town) knew we were having (marital) troubles. I thought 'Oh no how am I going to tell my boys?'

Wilken said he posted a "closed" sign on the cafe door, mopped up the blood and sat, thinking.

"I knew I'd probably be arrested and the boys would be without anybody," he said. "I thought about what to do and how to cover it up if I could."

District Court Judge Raymond Case then interrupted Wilken's testimony, saying he wanted to study some legal questions. The trial which has lasted five days, was recessed until Monday.

Earlier Wilken said Charlotte Carper, a relative of Mrs. Wilken, visited him in the Otoe County jail after his arrest. He said she told him "You better plead guilty or you'll never see your boys again."

When the first of his sons testified, Wilken lowered his head and quietly cried.

One of the boys discussed his parents' separation and said their father told them "he wanted her (Mrs. Wilken) back for our sake."

The defense case began Friday, and several witnesses disputed testimony from earlier prosecution witnesses. Among the disputes — Sons Dean and Don Wilken said their father never read books, and seldom magazines. They said they didn't see him read murder stories.

Charlotte Carper earlier testified she did see Wilken read murder stories. Wilken testified that before being jailed, "I hadn't read a book since I got out of high school."

Israel provides support for Lebanese Christian drive

Editor's note: In the heavy fighting in Lebanon, there have been reports of Israeli involvement in the border area. This story was passed by Israeli military censorship which cut parts of the original.

By Larry Thorson

Tel Aviv, Israel (AP) — Israel provided light arms, logistic support and communications links for the apparently successful Lebanese Christian drive against Palestinians and Moslem leftists in southern Lebanon, unofficial sources say.

Israeli government and military officials as usual deny that Israeli troops or military supplies are used in Lebanon's civil war. They maintain that "Israel does not intervene in Lebanon's internal affairs."

Israel has had a strong interest in securing its Lebanese border ever since Palestinian terrorist attacks were launched across it against the Israeli towns of Maalot and Qiryat Shemona in 1974, causing heavy civilian casualties and stunning the Jewish state.

Since that time, the Lebanese civil war has weakened the Palestinians and presented Israel with a golden opportunity to help drive the Palestinians away from the border.

For the record, Israeli officials prefer to talk of the "good fence" policy they are using to win the friendship of villagers in southern Lebanon. Many Lebanese have received medical treatment in Israel, several hundred work and buy food in Israel, and some Lebanese crops are sold across the now friendly border.

Details of the military side of Israel's Lebanon policy come from various unofficial sources: Israelis outside the government, journalists who have been to the border and across it, and Palestinians in the occupied West Bank who claim good knowledge of recent events in southern Lebanon.

None of them say Israeli troops are in combat there.

The only aspect of Israel's clandestine Lebanon policy to receive some official confirmation is the navy's surveillance of ports in southern Lebanon through which the Palestinians and Moslem leftists receive arms and other supplies. Israeli military spokesmen have confirmed several cases in which cargoes of munitions were turned away from Lebanon. Foreign reports call this Israel's naval blockade.

The unofficial sources list these elements in Israel's clandestine Lebanon policy: small patrols into southern Lebanon, a supply of light arms for Christian combatants, a training program for Christian forces, and a telephone or radio link across the border to provide liaison. Reports from southern Lebanon say Israel is also providing artillery cover for the Christian advance.

It is less certain that Israel is providing armored vehicles and helicopter support for Christian assaults on leftists and Palestinians.

Some of the sources said Israel gave armored personnel carriers and armored cars to the Lebanese. They based this on seeing American-made armor and some Soviet-made armor that could have been captured by Israel in past wars. Other sources weren't sure these vehicles had come from Israel.

The Soviet-made or American-made equipment could have fallen into the factions' hands when the Lebanese army dissolved.

Western correspondents on the Lebanese side of the border have seen Christian militiamen using Israeli arms and armored cars with Israeli markings but no Israeli soldiers or armor crews. The Christian fighters have privately admitted material help from the Israelis.)

Journalists at the scene have reported seeing Israeli directing traffic in southern Lebanon.

Israeli patrols into Lebanon have been standard practice for several years, the sources say. In August

The Associated Press photographed a small Israeli patrol 500 yards inside Lebanon.

The unofficial sources said Israel has trained and given light arms to sympathetic Lebanese. They could not estimate how many arms were supplied or how many men were trained. But one source listed the number of Lebanese villages affected by the Israeli program and estimated their combined population was 6,000-7,000.

Palestinian spokesmen in Beirut regularly claim Israeli helicopters ferry Christian troops into battle against Palestinians and Moslem leftists. Sources here doubt that Israel would be so obvious.

No combat deaths reported in truce attempt No. 57

the southern border hills overlooking Israel.

The Arab peacekeepers were deployed only on the Moslem side of the capital's dividing line. They were restricted to observation and reporting roles but are to turn into "retaliation forces" to impose the cease-fire after arrival of additional troops to form a 30,000-man contingent.

The Rayad agreement of Oct. 16, when Arab heads of state ordered the truce, was imperiled elsewhere by a building Christian drive to take over the southern border region that has been a Palestinian reserve for seven years.

The right-wing Christian Phalange party announced formation of an "army for defending the south," composed of Phalangist militiamen and their allies from the rightist national liberal party.

Special-interest money list led by labor, medicine

Washington (UPI) — Organized labor contributed nearly half the special-interest money that went to presidential and congressional candidates this year, Federal Election Commission records showed Friday.

According to spending reports filed by 52 political action committees that contribute to a variety of candidates, labor committees spent $2,486,409 in the primary campaigns. The medical profession, through its committees, spent $1,294,060 to nominate friendly candidates.

Another 50 or so committee reports have yet to be released by the FEC, which also Friday made available a list of every person who contributed amounts from $500 to $1,000, the legal limit for individuals, to Jimmy Carter's and President Ford's primary campaigns.

The total spent by just those political action committees whose totals were released Friday came to $5,298,215.

Among the big contributors to Carter were four men reported to be in line for high posts in the Defense and State Departments if he is elected. George Ball, Paul Nitze, Cyrus Vance and Paul Warnke

Also, Chicago Mayor Richard Daley, his two sons and several of his ward committeemen donated $500 apiece to Carter in July, after he wrapped up the Democratic nomination. In addition, maritime union leader Jesse Calhoon, who got Carter's support for legislation favorable to his union, gave the Democratic candidate $1,000.

Among top contributors to Ford were Dwayne O. Andreas and Kenneth Dahlberg, the Minnesota businessmen whose contributions to Richard Nixon's 1972 campaign figured in the Watergate investigation; Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, who along with family members contributed a total of $6,000; Ford's chief economic adviser Alan Greenspan, Housing Secretary Carla Hills, and industrialists with names such as Pillsbury, Firestone, Marriott and Whitney.

The most money from a single family came from nine Mosbachers. Robert — he was Ford's chief fund-raiser — Robert Jr., Lisa and Sandra Mosbacher of Houston and Emil, Emil Jr., Patricia, Gertrude and Kathryn Mosbacher of New York, each gave $1,000 to Ford.

Auto magnate Henry Ford II gave $1,000 to both Ford and Carter.

The contributors to Ford were largely from the corporate worlds of oil, automobiles and Eastern law firms.

The Carter list contained many contributors from Georgia, Georgetown, Manhattan and Hollywood.

Personalities

Irish president resigns

President Carroll O'Daly resigned Friday four days after Defense Minister Michael Donegan called him a "thundering disgrace" for allegedly procrastinating on bills designed to curb the outlawed Irish Republican Army. The resignation of the 65-year-old Irish head of state in Dublin climaxed a week of political feuding over Donegan's remarks and left the government of Prime Minister Liam Cosgrave with a major constitutional crisis.

Khadafy 'crazy' to Shah

The Shah of Iran believes that Libyan National leader Moammar Khadafy is crazy. "He's crazy. No doubt, the man is absolutely irresponsible and crazy," the Shah told CBS interviewer Mike Wallace.

Tiny gun ban favored

Sen. Alan Cranston says he is for banning "tiny" pistols, like the one a robber pointed at him in Washington, but not other guns for self-protection or hunting. "It's the first time I even looked at one of those and I saw how tiny they are, how easily concealed," the California Democrat told reporters of his encounter with three muggers recently. "It's so utterly hopeless when people walk around with one of those so tiny and commit crimes."

Diplomat changes jobs

Career diplomat Joseph J. Sisco has been inaugurated as president of American University in Washington, D.C.

'Boring show' almost over

John S. Knight, editor emeritus of the three-newspaper Knight-Ridder chain, says the 1976 presidential campaign is "a tedious, boring show which mercifully is nearing the end of its run."

Bishop continues plans

Dissident French Bishop Marcel Lefebvre will celebrate a mass in Friedrichshafen, West Germany, Sunday by using the abrogated liturgy in Latin in defiance of protests from five Roman Catholic bishops.

Missile missing; F14 found

Washington (AP) — An advanced Phoenix missile is still missing in the Atlantic Ocean, the Navy disclosed Friday, a day after the missile was reported found.

The secret missile was attached to an F14 fighter that fell overboard from the carrier John F. Kennedy on Sept. 14.

Following an extensive search the fighter was found in 1,900 feet of water on Thursday and at that time the Navy said the missile was still attached to it.

But an embarrassed Navy had to backtrack Friday morning, announcing that the Phoenix "is not attached to the aircraft as originally believed."

The Navy said a research submarine is continuing to search for the missile about 75 miles northwest of Scapa Flow, Scotland. Other U.S. ships were preparing to raise the F14 from the ocean floor. The plane, loaded with sophisticated electronic equipment, was reported lying on its back.

Naval officials also said two civilian salvage ships leased by the Navy have left Scotland to assist in the search for the missile. One of them carries an unmanned minisubmarine equipped with television cameras.

'Dirty Bird' dies of bullet wounds

Fort Worth, Tex. (UPI) — Howard C. Collins, the second victim of last week's CB shootout at Halton City died Thursday of bullet wounds in his chest and abdomen.

The 51-year-old sign shop operator who was known on the radio as "Dirty Bird," was accused of allowing his base station citizens band transmitter to "bleed over" from Channel 6 to Channel 7 because he was using too much power.

An hour-long argument over the airways Oct. 15 provoked Collins and Don Hitcher, known as the "Blue Goose," to settle their differences in a fist fight alongside Airport Freeway.

Shots were fired as the two squared off and Collins fell to the ground. Hitcher sped away from the scene, but crashed into a utility pole. His body was riddled with bullet wounds.

Comprehensive Plan postponed

The much delayed Comprehensive Plan is behind schedule once again.

According to the City-County Planning Department, a review of the draft of the plan scheduled for the last week of October has been moved back to early December.

City Councilman Bob Sikuta, chairman of a committee on the subject, said that Barton Aschman consultants, the planning staff and city officials have agreed more time is needed to compose the final draft.

The final adoption process of the plan should start in January with hearings before the City-County Planning Commission, City Council and County Board, Sikuta said.

Park classes hardly felt like school

Students from the fifth and sixth grade classes at Maude Rousseau Elementary School spent a crisp day at Wilderness Park Friday discovering how the outdoors can fit into different types of curriculum.

Physical education, math, science and music all took to the open air as students measured trees for circumference, height and board feet, sang country music, enjoyed outdoor games and studied nature in the wild.

A picnic lunch made it seem more like play than work, but all involved termed it a very educational day.

A controversial pair.

There is little question that Amendment 6, which opponents claim is a double-barreled assault on the separation of church and state and would be a drain on state tax resources, is the most controversial of the eight proposed constitutional changes on the Nov. 2 ballot.

The lines have been drawn and organizations have been formed to support or oppose either or both parts of the proposition — which actually is two amendments in one. Public school educators probably will spend the most money and effort in opposition to Amendment 6. Nebraskans pressing the rights of the handicapped and those favoring "equal opportunity" in higher education are among those pushing the proposition.

The amendment is broken down into two parts: Amendment 6 (1) authorizes the Legislature to permit school districts to contract with private schools or other private institutions in the state for providing education and other services of a nonsectarian nature to handicapped children under the age of 21.

Although the state is required to provide such services for handicapped children, proponents of 6 (1) point out that they are not always available or adequate. They argue it may, in some instances, be cheaper and more effective to contract for services where good private facilities or programs exist.

Some opponents of the amendment believe that 6 (1) is only a foot in the door which will allow massive doses of public tax money to be channeled to private education in the future.

Amendment 6 (2) would permit the Legislature to make grants or loans to students at nonpublic institutions offering post-secondary education: private colleges and universities, professional, vocational or commercial schools and the like. Such financial aid must be limited to non-sectarian purposes. The amendment would also permit the state to match federal grants to students attending nonpublic institutions of higher education.

It is hard to believe that at the heart of the issue this is not a church-state matter, although proponents of both parts of Amendment 6 argue that it is not.

If this is not a church-state argument, it is an economic one.

Nebraskans have erected a barrier to providing tax dollars to private or parochial education for a number of reasons — among those sustaining reasons, the realization that taxpayers can't or won't afford the maintenance of a dual educational system.

We sometimes believe that the strict constructionists don't think about such things as the physically or mentally handicapped child who is not afforded the care it needs. Or, in the case of 6 (2), the private college student who is denied the financial support he needs because of some fidelity to seemingly irrelevant concepts.

It is tempting to sweep aside dogmatic interpretations of the constitution so that the people's resources can be used in a practical way to help where best they can.

Yet, chipping away at constitutional safeguards bit by bit leaves them completely ineffective in the long run.

And the potential for duplication of services and the resulting wasting of resources in such proposals is too great to overlook.

AGAINST votes on Amendment 6 (1) and Amendment 6 (2) are advised.

IDA bonds, TIF

Two proposed constitutional amendments on the Nov. 2 ballot are designed to aid local governments in spurring development. One, Amendment 5, deals with tax increment financing (TIF) of the redevelopment of blighted areas; the other, Amendment 7, would expand the use of industrial development bonds.

Under Amendment 5, the Legislature would be permitted to enable a city, county or other local subdivision of government to issue bonds for the funding of redevelopment projects. These bonds would be secured through a device known as tax increment financing.

For example, a city could acquire blighted land, clear it and otherwise prepare it for new construction by a private developer. The bonds used to finance the improvements would be retired with the additional revenue generated by the improvements; in other words, the taxes resulting from the increased assessed evaluation of the improvements. When the obligation is fulfilled, the property would be taxed as any other property within that taxing jurisdiction. Theoretically there would be no loss of the tax base to the taxing jurisdiction since it would receive an amount equal to the tax revenue prior to the initiation of the redevelopment project.

Legislation has long been on the books authorizing community development agencies (such as a city council) to acquire blighted land and prepare it for development and to finance the work with bonds.

The new twist is the method of retiring the bonds.

Proponents visualize rapid redevelopment of blighted areas if the amendment passes. Fourteen states permit the use of tax increment financing. It was initially pushed here by the Omaha Chamber of Commerce.

Problems develop, however, between the intent as expressed by proponents and the language of the proposed constitutional amendment.

Those arguing the case in favor of Amendment 5 say that bonds issued and retired by tax increment financing would cover public costs only — site acquisition and clearing, for example. But the amendment speaks of "indebtment . . . for the purposes of acquiring and redeveloping substandard or blighted property . . ." This could be construed to mean that the bonds could cover the total cost of the redevelopment project.

Amendment 7 expands the reach of the Industrial Development Act by broadening the methods available to cities and counties in providing property to private interests and allowing cities and counties to issue tax-exempt revenue bonds to acquire property for non-manufacturing "commercial or business enterprises" which are not in the retail business.

At present only manufacturing or industrial firms are covered by the act, which is said to have accounted for 14,000 new Nebraska jobs since its enactment.

The amendment is aimed at spurring growth of non-manufacturing, non-retail enterprises such as computer facilities or warehouses or research and development facilities. It is argued that since many surrounding states permit industrial bond financing of non-manufacturing businesses, Nebraska is placed at a competitive disadvantage in seeking new industries and job opportunities.

Opponents fear that indiscriminate bond financing of industrial and commercial enterprises could hike municipal bond interest rates and create an unhealthy competition in the money market.

To what disadvantageous degree such fears might materialize is uncertain, however.

Another problem is how far bonding authority would extend; to how many kinds of industrial and commercial enterprises will government be allowed to make low-interest loans?

The Legislature will have to use great care in determining, if the amendment passes, what kind of non-manufacturing and commercial enterprises will be included under the Industrial Development Act.

But IDA has appeared to work to Nebraska's advantage and the wise use of expanded authority should result in greater returns.

A FOR vote on Amendment 7 is advised.

Why did the aristocratic plantation slave-owners lose the war to the "bean-eating" army up north? The Confederate surrender laid the foundation for unification of the United States of America "with liberty and justice for all."

Will our leaders today inflict surrender on inflation with like determination as the Union Army years ago?

ago I saw a little girl struck by a car as she tried to cross the street. I saw a father race toward her and hold her to him as she struggled in the agony of death. I saw all the plans that had been made for her dashed and that came over his face. I could only offer a prayer that such a thing might never happen again.

Today my daughter, who is six years old, started off to school. Her cocker spaniel, whose name is Scott, watched her leave and whined his belief in the folly of education.

Tonight we talked about school. She told me about the girl who sits in front of her, a girl with yellow curls, and about the boy across the aisle who makes faces; about the teacher who has eyes in the back of her head; about the trees in the school yard and the big girl who does not believe in Santa Claus.

Now, as this is written, she is sound asleep with her doll "Paddy" in her arms. When her doll gets broken or her finger gets cut or her head gets bumped, I can fix them. But when she starts across the street — then, Mr. Driver, she is in your hands.

Much as I wish I could, it's not possible for me to be with her all the time. I have to work to pay for her home, her clothes, her education. So, Mr. Driver, please help me to look out for her.

Please don't run over my little girl.

Polls of little beyond current value

Charles B. Seib

WASHINGTON — Maybe we should let the pollsters decide the election.

We are told (by pollsters, of course) that people plan to stay home in droves on Nov. 2 and that the next president will be selected by a decided minority of his fellow Americans. No one knows the reason for this national turn-off, but we are assured that it exists.

The pollsters, on the other hand, have been acting to do the job and have been dry-running for months. Not a day goes by without new readings on how the latest presidential gaffe or Carter indiscretion has affected the national political temperature.

A pollster-decided election could be done by computer, all very clean and scientific. Precisely at noon on Nov. 2, one of IBM's best could be fed the latest findings of the whole bunch — Gallup, Harris, Roper, Time and the New York Times, and the rest. Then the computer could do its mysterious, non-partisan thing and out would come the winning ticket like the fortune card from a carnival scale.

It's a nutty idea, more appropriate for 1984 than for 1976. I offer it only to point up a fact: The pollsters are too much with us and are polluting the political process.

They have sold us on the scientific validity of their business. We are bemused by their ability to determine the sentiments of tens of millions by talking to a thousand or two. We fail to question the non-scientific judgments they make and some of the practices they engage in.

Not until its third page did the release reveal that the poll had been taken before the second Carter-Ford debate, which was held six days earlier, and that early figures from a survey taken after that debate showed that Carter "may be" recouping his losses.

After several newspapers questioned the thrust of the release, the Gallup people did some quick repair work. They rushed subscribers corrective material putting the fact that the survey was taken prior to the second debate after the first paragraph. But the 47-45% standing was still reported as the current one. It was not until later in the week that Gallup released figures showing that Carter had recouped and now led Ford 49-42.

Not only was it journalistically at fault in presenting outdated figures as current ones, but the Gallup release also demonstrated the perishability of poll results generally. Although barely a week old, the Oct. 12 figures were of value only as history.

Nevertheless, such figures can profoundly affect the course of a campaign. They can provide valuable political ammunition: President Ford was reported to be exulting over the Gallup Oct. 12 figures even before they were made public. Poll figures can discourage campaign workers or give them a false sense of security. They can even persuade voters that the election is settled and there is no reason to go to the polls.

Polling is big business and it will not go away. So, for help in assessing poll results, here are a few tips adapted from a new critique of polling, "Lies, Damn Lies, and Statistics" by Michael Wheeler.

The margin for error. It is small in a properly done poll but it can be important. For example, the margin for error in that 47-45 Gallup poll probably was about two per cent either way. So the true sentiment might have been up to 49-43 for Carter or 47-45 for Ford. In other words, a result as close as that must be considered a tossup.

The silent ones. An increasing number of people are refusing to talk to pollsters. Since they won't talk, there is no way to measure how they distort the figures by their silence.

The undecided. Pollsters tend to push people into making a selection; large numbers of undecideds make their work look less precise than they like. So the number of undecided voters may often be understated. In the Oct. 12 Gallup release, undecideds were shown as six per cent. But is it reasonable to think that all but six per cent of the voters were ready before the second debate to state their preference?

The point in time. Polls are valid only for the time the questions were asked. This may be the most important reminder of all. Wheeler puts it well: "Opinion is transitory, ever changing, like a cloud. In response to the slightest breeze, it can billow or evaporate. No matter what, it will be a different shape tomorrow."

Arab boycott issue stirred for votes

Tom Wicker

NEW YORK — Good for the television networks, that they refused to be conned by the White House into airing Gerald Ford's news conference this week as if it were a solemn and privileged function of the presidency. Going only six days after a previous news conference, just two weeks before the election, and with no indication of non-campaign news developments, Ford's appearance before the press was patently political, a campaign event staged in the White House.

The networks might more easily and cautiously have taken the attitude that Ford, as president, could pre-empt the air waves at will; and Jimmy Carter, the Democratic nominee, would have had no recourse but to complain. But in asserting their right to view Ford as sometimes a candidate rather than always a head of state, network news executives took a notable step toward fair play and equalization of an incumbent's natural advantages.

Ford then proved them right by conducting a news conference devoid of any but the most political content — as for example his confusing attempts to take some kind of credit for what he called "affirmative action" against the Arab boycott of American firms doing business with Israel. "Affirmative action" is not a phrase or a topic for which Ford has shown enthusiasm in other fields, and his claim for it in the boycott matter is as thin as his civil rights record.

Last November, for example, when the political campaign was not well under way and Ford was not yet weighing every action in terms of its net effect on the voters, an effort was being made in Congress to provide money authorizations in advance for the next three years for the operations of the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice's Anti-trust Division.

In describing the paucity of resources in the Anti-trust Division, the Senate committee report on the measure, dated Nov. 25, 1976, had this to say:

"The investigation ordered by the President of the alleged Arab boycott of certain U.S. firms is being staffed by only two anti-trust lawyers — one using 20% of his time and the other 50%."

That's neither action nor affirmative, amounting to the fulltime services of less than one lawyer. And while it's true that the administration is said to have seven lawyers working on that litigation, well-placed sources say that no broader investigation now is being conducted. Even so, these sources say, the Justice Department is anxious to settle the Bechtel case out of court.

The major questions this country faces in the months just ahead — unemployment, the huge deficits, the growing burden of armaments on each side of the great divide — have been largely ignored. Or they have been treated as debating points to be scored off the opponent. In short, it has become a game of punch and poke and, if Ford has come charging out of the rose garden bellowing like the bull of Bashan, he has the excuse of provocation by his rival.

The Europeans may have themselves, as in the instance of Britain and Italy, made a mess of their own affairs. But they look to the United States to show the way to stability and a resolution of the problems plaguing the world.

The longer the campaign goes on, the more dismayed are many of America's oldest friends in Europe. The Ford bombardment on Eastern Europe seemed to be the climax.

The only relief comes with the fact that the campaign is nearing an end. After all, it has gone on for nearly a year during which time it has been almost impossible, with the stalemate between Congress and the President, to see any firm direction in American policy.

Both candidates have demagogued such vital issues as the sovereignty of the Panama Canal in language that must have tickled Ronald Reagan who in the primaries initiated the clamor over control of the canal zone. On a nuclear agreement over offensive weapons, President Ford threw in some inaccuracies that will surely in the future make compromise more difficult.

Late last year — again before votes became paramount — Rogers C. B. Morton, then secretary of commerce, and a House commerce subcommittee staged a long tug-of-war as to whether or not Morton would supply the subcommittee with the names of companies that had reported being asked to participate in the Arab boycott.

Armed with a legal opinion from Atty. Gen. Levi and the obvious backing of the President, Morton at first refused to comply with a congressional subpoena ordering him to turn over the list of companies; then he made an offer, rejected by the subcommittee, to turn over the list on condition the subcommittee kept it confidential; and finally, under immediate threat of contempt of Congress proceedings, he provided the names in return for the subcommittee's pledge to handle it "in consonance with their asserted confidentiality."

Ford may be right that Jimmy Carter, if he is elected, cannot as easily as he claims put an end to the Arab boycott. But in more than two years in office, Gerald Ford seems hardly to have tried — until he discovered how badly he needed votes.

Europe dismayed by election antics

of eligible voters went to the polls. And in neither country is there any lawful compulsion to vote.

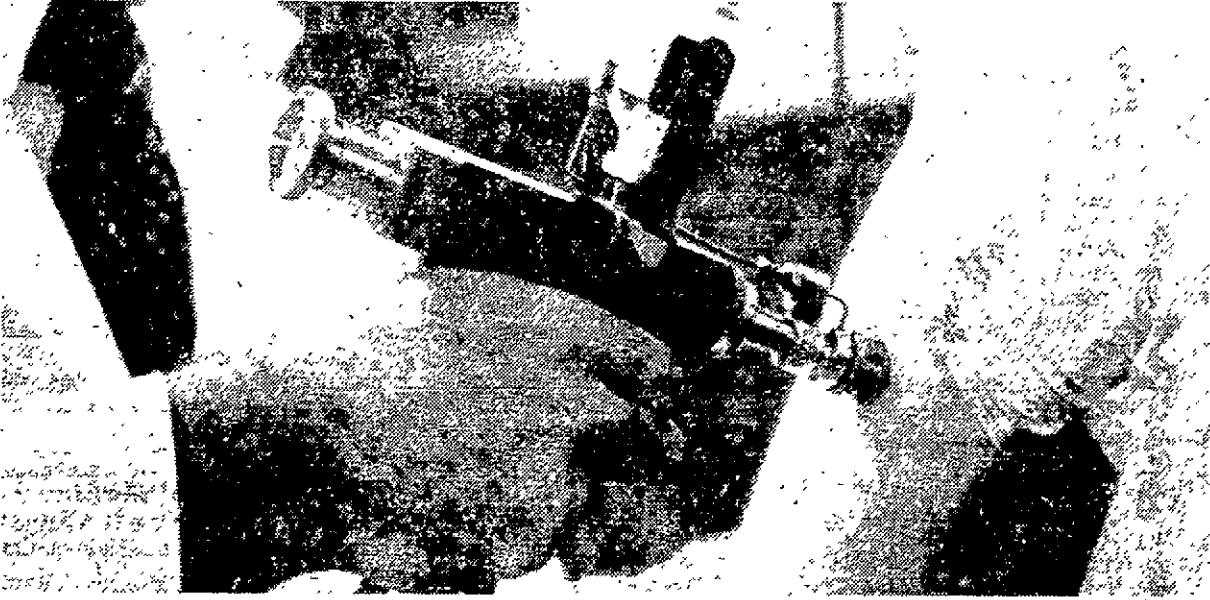

In his press conference, the first formal televised conference in many weeks, the President seemed to this observer to score points. That was thanks in part to the questions put to him. They tended to be of the "have you stopped beating your wife?" type.

Attacking Carter for downgrading the position of the United States in the world, he is likely to have found a sympathetic audience. One of the sad consequences of the campaign is the attack and counterattack on American strength or lack of it. This can give satisfaction only to America's adversaries, while spreading disquiet among those who are our friends.

The crux of the matter, it seems to me, is this. We know Gerald Ford, we know what he has been throughout his entire career in Washington. That is a Republican conservative from Grand Rapids, Mich. He has deviated from that position only when pushed to extremes, as in his primary contest with Reagan when he was more conservative than he would otherwise have been.

It was the killing play. Had East played any other card in his hand, South would have made the contract. Thus, suppose East had led a spade or a low heart. In either case, South would win in his hand, take a trump finesse, and easily make five.

But the queen of hearts returned left South without recourse. Forced to win the heart in dummy, he had no effective way of returning to his hand for another trump finesse.

Most players would rather be declarer than a defender — largely because they find declarer's role more challenging. But a defender's role is frequently crucial, and on many deals good defense will overcome declarer's best efforts.

Flu shots had long road

By Gracia McAndrew

Star Staff Writer

During the peak of the flu season last February, a new kind of Type A influenza broke out in Ft. Dix, N.J.

Called A/New Jersey/76 or, more commonly, swine flu — although the disease is not transmitted from pigs to people nor can persons contract it by eating pork — the disease affected 500 persons in the Ft. Dix military post and resulted in one death.

According to Dr. Paul Stoesz, director of the State Health Department's Division of Disease Control, "every 10 to 12 years there are major changes in the virus particle. Then, there is virtually 100% lack of immunity."

When this happens, spread of the influenza stands an excellent chance of becoming "global, pandemic," he said.

Because of the disease's virulence and because of an early prediction that a major outbreak of the disease could occur during the 1976-77 flu season, President Ford initiated plans last March for a national mass immunization program for swine flu.

Included in the plans were the production and administration of a bivalent vaccine and a monovalent vaccine. The effectiveness of the vaccines lasts from six to 18 months.

The bivalent shot is a combination of two vaccines, one for swine flu and another for A/Victoria — the virus causing illness during the last flu season. Elderly citizens and those categorized as high-risk persons because of underlying illness — diabetes and heart, kidney or respiratory diseases, for example — will receive the bivalent vaccine.

The monovalent shot contains only the swine flu vaccine. It is intended for the bulk of the persons to be immunized — younger people, including pregnant women, are not in the high risk group. However, no vaccine is yet available for children. Announcement of the production of such a vaccine is expected around the first of November, Stoesz said.

But the $135 million immunization program has not been without its troubles. Initially, some labeled the program a election year ploy of Ford.

Shortly after the program was announced, the nation's insurance industry refused to provide liability coverage for the drug companies manufacturing the swine flu vaccine. Because of the magnitude of the government program, a potential for a large number of "baseless" suits existed, insurers said.

As a result, five months later Congress passed a bill making the government responsible for settling any lawsuits arising from alleged injuries or deaths related to the immunization program.

Another stumbling block turned up when it was discovered last June that one of the drug companies had manufactured the wrong flu vaccine. Consequently, a four-to-six-week delay was predicted for those in the high-risk group.

Week by week and month by month, the actual immunization was pushed back. And with each delay, public confidence in the program and the vaccine itself dwindled.

Turnouts at public immunization clinics across the nation have fallen below early projection levels. Even clinics in four northeast Nebraska counties Monday resulted in the inoculation of only 35% of the area's population over 18 years old.

Also, recent reports that mass immunization in the U.S. is no longer necessary since swine flu won't make its appearance this year haven't helped sell the program.

However, the U.S. government has opted for better-safe-than-sorry stance.

"The program is anticipatory," Stoesz said. "Like insurance, you may need it."

While many other countries are purchasing or producing swine flu vaccine, none are planning immunization programs comparable to this nation's.

But, "the reason for doing it in the U.S. is because it is within our technical capabilities to do it," Stoesz said.

The odds for flu this season are a 10% likelihood the virus will be swine flu and a 90% possibility it will be A/Victoria," Stoesz said. However, if swine flu does break out, individuals hazard a greater risk by not being immunized than by taking the vaccine.

"People think this vaccine is brand new that it's not tested, risky," Stoesz said. "But it is manufactured in the same fashion that vaccine has been manufactured for the last eight years."

"During the 1940s vaccines were impure. This vaccine has been pretty much cleaned up. By that I mean, the impurities that cause reactions have been taken out."

Another misconception is that the inoculation will give you the flu. But it won't, Stoesz said, because the vaccine is made from a killed virus not a live one.

Among the most common reactions to the inoculation are a sore arm at the site of the shot, headache, low fever, chills and aching muscles.

Stoesz added there are other, more severe, reactions, but they seldom occur. These include allergic reactions causing people to collapse, break out in hives or have an asthma attack. These can be avoided, Stoesz said, if a person is known to have a history of such reactions.

In addition, one "extremely infrequent" reaction to the vaccine is death "although no deaths have been attributed to this type of vaccine since the 1940s," Stoesz said.

However, "individuals who are hypersensitive to egg products should not receive the vaccine," he continued. "You can go to a physician for a skin test for this."

Saying he intended to get his swine flu shot, Director of the State Health Department Dr. Henry Smith said, "I think this is a good preventative program and I think it is an appropriate course of action."

Referring to the negative attitude toward the program, Smith said, "I think there is a psychological characteristic a lot of people have. Whenever there is anything new or different they psychologically tend to resist change."

"Because of the severe economical impact on a country by a widespread influenza epidemic, even if the risk of this happening is only 1%, this still is a good preventative measure," he said. "The cost of the program is much less than the cost incurred by an epidemic," not to mention the avoidance of a high death rate potential.

Keeping active makes time seem short

By Joanne Farris

Dear Joanne Farris: I always enjoy your column. In your article, "Is it Worth it to Retire?" you asked readers to tell you what people do after they become senior citizens.

Believe me, I do enough to wish the weeks were longer. I am 72 years young and very active.

I belong to the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP), attend meetings regularly and go on many trips. I'm also active in other clubs, such as Sons of Italy, and attend plays and concerts.

Homemakers Club I love. I was made program chairman this year.

And, believe it or not, I am a volunteer for two nursing (or retirement) homes, which I dearly love. I feel like I can bring a ray of sunshine to the lonely shut-ins. I go once a week.

I am always included in the festivities of my daughter's friends-parties which I enjoy.

Staying young means being active and interested. How can one be bored with a schedule like mine?

I always find time first for God; I start my day with prayers and end it with Bible reading.

It's a beautiful world. I hope as long as my health remains good I can live on to do better things. I might mention I have had two heart attacks — still no rocking chair for me. Signed, J.

F., Baltimore.

Comment: Your days are certainly full and productive.

Your comment about the rocking chair reminds me of something. Our county has just published a marvelous "Comprehensive Plan for Delivery of Services to the Elderly." It lists about every program the county has for older persons and who are eligible, what each program does, and how you can get into it. One program they describe is Friendship with the Elderly, which is similar to what you do, visiting people who are confined in nursing homes.

The cover of this splendid book shows a picture of a woman in a sunbonnet cutting flowers in her garden. She is one of the best workers in Senior Lobby and the Council on Aging. When she was identified as the "star" of the new publication, she laughed and said: "I have a broad porch at my house; it faces out over the garden and the yard. It's long, too, and there's a swell rocking chair on that porch. I never get to sit in it; I'm too busy. That cat just loves that chair."

Just the opposite, of course, are the many young people who have little furniture. I know a few who have only two chairs, and one of them is a rocker, which they love to use. Actually there are a lot of things you can do sitting in a rocker: shell peas, knit or embroider, read, listen to music, talk, just sit. It's a relaxing feeling to rock gently back and forth.

Visit brief for acting ag chief

By Dominick Costello

Farm Editor

Grain exports, meat imports and politics highlighted a brief three-hour visit to Lincoln Friday by Acting Secretary of Agriculture John Knebel.

"This trip is frankly political. It is paid for by the President Ford Committee but what I am doing is for agriculture — listening to farmers' concerns," Knebel said at his news conference.

Knebel had a quick tour of the Nebraska Tractor Testing station with Bill Splinter, agricultural engineering chairman, which he referred to as a "kind of consumer's guide to tractors program." He visited with engineers about the methods they use to check safety of tractors and about the price of farm machinery.

He saw a $56,000 tractor, wearing 8 tires that cost $450 each, that is to be tested at the center. He also got a look at a newly developed method of restructuring meat from meat trimmings in flaked form for use in cafeterias and commercial fast-food outlets.

Farm leaders who gathered for the demonstration of the new meat products took advantage of the opportunity to pepper Knebel with questions about grain exports, meat imports and other farm programs.

Knebel promised to continue the farm programs of the Ford administration aimed at expanding grain exports and noted that "if the beef checkoff is passed it will provide us with an opportunity to expand beef exports as well."

Knebel promised that the administration will move "early next week to end once and for all the circumventing of the meat import quota at Mayaguez, Puerto Rico.

The processing of imported meat at Mayaguez, which escapes import regulations that put a quota on meats under a processing clause, has been a particular sore spot with cattlemen.

Knebel acknowledged that the effort to stop the imports may be met by a countersuit in court. "It seems that almost everything the department does these days ends up in having someone want to sue us."

Knebel displayed a good sense of humor during the various interviews but carefully avoided jokes, saying "undersecretaries were never allowed to tell jokes."

Knebel twice blamed the woes of efforts to market farm products overseas on the Department of State which he described as "getting nervous whenever we work out agreements on supplying food to other nations" but agreed that such pacts were "very important to farmers and to overseas buyers who need a dependable supply."

During his visit, Knebel met with honey producers about excessive honey imports and with veterinarians about the problems of Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) regulations restricting the sale of small quantities of pesticides from larger containers as well as hearing other concerns of farm groups.

Knebel said that the USDA has a task force of 80 scientists that "work hard to keep EPA regulations honest," and noted that President Ford ordered the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) to check with the Department of Agriculture before issuing any regulations affecting farmers.

Knebel ducked most questions about impending agricultural legislation but did acknowledge that there should be some increase in target price supports for farm crops and some changes in the ways government aids farmers in recovering from disasters due to weather.

He also noted farmers were concerned about the lack of storage and need some easing of restrictions on government loans on grain storage facilities.

Asked about a story to the effect that there was a directive from Washington officials that no USDA official should tell ethnic jokes, Knebel said, "I don't know of any such directive but we have 100,000 employees, possibly there is one I don't know about."

Knebel also took a poke at Jimmy Carter's farm program, describing it as a one crop "peanut concept," and predicting that farmers' freedom under Republican farm policies would disappear under Carter.

10 arrested in Omaha on drug charges

Omaha (AP) — Ten persons, two of whom are currently serving prison sentences, were arrested by vice and narcotics officers Thursday on felony warrants charging them with unlawful delivery of controlled substances.

Vice and narcotics Sgt. William Crawford said Thursday night that the arrests resulted from lengthy investigations and drug purchases by undercover police officers.

Crawford said purchases of heroin, amphetamines, hashish, marijuana and cocaine led to the warrants, which were signed by Municipal Court Judge Paul J. Hickman.

Crawford said Lt. Bernard Venditte headed 14 police officers and an official from the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration who made the arrests from 1 p.m. until midnight. Several other persons named in the warrants were still being sought.

Two of those arrested Thursday were 17 years old and one was 16. They were released to their parents on signature bonds.

Adults arrested were: Nicholas Payne, 26; Mark Tollander, 23, two counts; Fred L. Pokorny, 19; Alan L. Sadofsky, 21, two counts; Earl Cobb, 22; Mark D. Fletcher, 18; and Donald L. Quinn, 18.

Police records indicate Tollander is serving sentence in Douglas County Jail and Cobb is in the state penitentiary in Lincoln. Payne was released on $500 cash bond; the amount that each adult would have to post for release.

Lawsuit filed over dike on Loup River

Columbus (UPI) — The City of Columbus and Platte County have been named in a lawsuit filed in Platte County District Court by eight land owners south of the Platte River.

The property owners allege that because of a dike on the north side of the Loup River, the value of their property has gone down and they have not been adequately compensated for the loss.

Petitioners in the suit are Marvin and Lianne Charipar, Mathew and Olga Foral, Casper and Lorine Mueller, John J. Neater, Ralph Neater, R and T Corp., Columbus Trailer Sale Inc. and the Garretson Equipment Co.

The suit contends the dike allows the river to change its course only to the south, causing erosion of the land. Any flood waters on the Loup will spill out on the south side, according to the suit.

No dollar amount of damages was claimed in the suit.

No hearing date has been set.

Armstrong said innocent

Omaha (AP) — An Omaha man was found innocent by a Douglas County District Court jury Thursday in connection with the June 19 shooting death of Walter W. Harris, 20.

Harris died of a gunshot wound to the head. Leo J. Armstrong, 21, was charged with second degree murder in connection with the death.

The shooting occurred outside an Omaha after-hours club. A loaded gun was found by police near Harris' body and defense attorney Paul Watts argued that his client acted in self defense.

Youth injured in explosion

Shelby (AP) — An explosion at the Shelby Co-op Business Association bulk plant Thursday evening injured one youth and blew the top of one storage tank.

Eugene Reisendorf of Shelby reportedly was loading diesel fuel at the plant when the explosion occurred. Reisendorf escaped injury, but his son, Michael, was hospitalized in Osceola.

State Digest

North Platte parks lauded

North Platte — The North Platte Parks and Recreation Department has won the 1976 Grand Award from the National Sporting Goods Association for its "outstanding long-range park and recreation development program and its excellent use of parklands to meet the community's recreational needs. Completion of a giant new indoor multi-purpose recreational complex for public use which was made possible by Federal funding and citizen support brought special note from the judges.

Hastings eyes industrial park

Hastings — The Hastings Utilities Board Friday authorized $348,570 in public funds for development of an industrial park southwest of the city. The park, being developed by the Hastings Economic Development Corp., is expected to be annexed into the city after seven years, officials said.

Midland hosting all faiths

Fremont — Midland Lutheran College will open its chapel doors to members of all faiths during a special Reformation service on Sunday Oct. 31. It was on that day in 1517 that Martin Luther nailed 95 theses to the church door in Wittenberg, Germany and was excommunicated from the Catholic church, beginning the "Protestant Reformation." A mass choir of 120 voices will be featured during the 4 p.m. service.

Swedish lecturer slated in Omaha

Omaha — The first visiting dignitary to speak at the University of Nebraska Medical Center's new College of Pharmacy will be the chairman of the Department of Forensic Medicine at Sweden's Karolinska Institute. Dr. Sten Orrenius will speak on studies in drug metabolism at 4 p.m. Monday, Oct. 25 in the college's auditorium. His lecture will consider how the liver handles drugs.

Peru to host swing choir confab

Peru — Peru State College will host the third annual High School Swing Choir Clinic Tuesday in the college auditorium. Choirs from seven Nebraska towns and two in Iowa will participate in the day-long clinic. Schools participating are Wyoming, David City, Fairbury, Falls City, Nebraska City, Seward and Omaha Bryan. Iowa schools are Oakland and Fremont-Mills.

Ogallala studies sports complex

Ogallala — A joint city-school district sports complex is in the planning stages in Ogallala.

McC far ahead in donations

By Dick Holman
Star Staff Writer

Rep. John Y. McCollister reported more than double the amount of recent campaign contributions listed Friday by Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky in their race for the U.S. Senate.

Reports filed with the secretary of state show Republican McCollister collected $53,053 during the latest 2½-week disclosure period, while Democrat Zorinsky's receipts totalled $26,201.

The new contributions to McCollister brought his campaign-to-date total to $312,165, compared to $179,934 for Zorinsky.

McCollister spent $70,161 during the early October period, bringing his total expenses to $307,173. He showed a $4,991 balance.

Zorinsky's $34,111 latest expenditures move that total up, to $177,416, leaving a $2,517 balance.

In the 2nd District House contest, also between two Omahans, State Sen. John Cavanaugh is going into the red while his Republican opponent Lee Terry, former TV newscaster, shows a healthy campaign fund balance.

Cavanaugh reported $13,909 in latest receipts toward a $99,969 year-long total. He most recently spent $18,175 toward $99,509 in total payouts, leaving a $460 balance. However, the Democrat also listed debts totalling $22,563.

Terry collected $35,107 and spent $19,179 during the period. His total receipts to date are $97,816 versus $81,888 in expenditures, and he reported a $15,928 balance.

Incumbent 1st District Republican Rep. Charles Thone of Lincoln reported total campaign contributions of $114,932 to date and $69,898 in spending for a $45,034 balance.

Thone's $11,834 in latest receipts included $4,500 from the Committee for Thorough Agricultural Political Education, San Antonio, Tex.; $500 each from Ford Civic Action Fund, Dearborn, Mich.; Nebraska Construction Industry Political Action Committee (PAC), Omaha; Restaurateurs PAC, Chicago; Action Committee for Rural Electrification, Washington, D.C.; and Nebraska Dental PAC (or NEDPAC), Lincoln.

The McCollister-Zorinsky campaigns drew numerous contributions from Nebraska business executives, but each also reported significant sums from organizations outside the state.

McCollister got $5,000 from the Committee for Thorough Agricultural Political Education, $3,000 from National Agents PAC, Washington, and $2,500 each from E-

F. Hutton Group PAC, New York City, and Nebraska GOP Federal Campaign Account, Lincoln.

Thousands-dollar McCollister donations were made by Charles Peterson, Atkinson; Ethel Pew, Philadelphia; Business/Industry PAC, Washington; Chrysler Nonpartisan PAC, Detroit; Amoco PAC, Chicago; NEDPAC, Lincoln; Restaurateurs PAC, Chicago; United Technologies Corp. PAC, Hartford, Conn.

Zorinsky's largest contribution during the period, $2,500, came from the Seafarer's Political Activity, Brooklyn, N.Y. He got $1,000 each from the Boilermakers-Blacksmiths Legislative Education-Action Program, CWA-COPE-PCC, Laborer's Political League all of Washington, and Esther Rice of Omaha.

But Zorinsky picked up $3,510 grassroots support from 10 counties' Democratic committees.

He also got $500 each from Engineer's PAC, Washington; ILGWU Campaign Committee, New York City; a California business executive and the Nebraska Realtors Association, Lincoln; and $800 from the David S. Rice Trust of Omaha.

The Nebraska Democratic State Central Committee report listed $152,684 in receipts and $145,194 in expenses.

Wilken

—Son Don Wilken refuted testimony given by Mrs. Wilken's father, Denzel Carper, who said Don "suggested that he knew what daddy killed mommy with."

Don, 12, said Carper had taken him to the Wilken farm near Palmyra and asked the youth if he knew of anything "that looks like a rolling pin or a bat." The boy said he brought Carper a bat-like tire tester, which "was in the same place" in a shed where he had left it weeks before Mrs. Wilken's death.

five to three cents.

The room will house his "collected works" but the shelves were bare. Dr. Allan Schleich, chairman of the Department of History, said the collected works, a single volume of letters exchanged between social reformer Dorothea Dix and Fillmore, had not arrived.

The dedication speech was short. The speaker offered some memorable comments from Fillmore's inaugural address... and then sat down.

Fourteen persons attended.

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?"

Psalms 2 and Acts 4:25

We quote excerpts from a letter received from a young lady—AND I MEAN LADY—from over in Alabama:

"I am a sixteen year old girl who reads your column every week in our local newspaper. It does me good to see someone who is strong and sure in his Christian faith to write such straight-forward articles in a time when the world has suddenly become so "free" and lenient. In this letter, I'd like to show my reverence, fear and love in God and His Laws.

"I hardly know where to start. I guess the best way to start is to state the topic of my letter: sex. That's not surprising when you consider that that's about all that anyone talks about these days. First, let me say I am not a "prude." In fact, I consider myself a liberal Baptist. I am fed up and literally enraged at the events taking place in our world.

"Today, sex seems to be some kind of idol that demands worship. No longer is sex a private, personal gift from God. It is displayed and exhibited everywhere a person turns. Today, the young people say they have sexual "freedom." What they need to realize is that this "freedom" is really the enslaving bonds of the devil.

"Young people no longer respect, fear, or obey God's rules concerning sex. They insist that as long as they are sincere, pre-marital sex is a beautiful experience. And society is beginning to condone it. Today, people say that marriage is a terrible thing which destroys that relationship they have and marriage is not necessary. They feel that if they live together before their marriage will be better. Sure, marriage is rough sometimes. But God will help if people will obey Him and ask Him. If I remember correctly, God gave us marriage for the purpose that a couple could avoid fornication. Today the true, sacred meaning of marriage has been disregarded, because it's "irrelevant." To me, sex before marriage is sin, and no beautiful gentle words can mask that.

"And today, homosexuals are being treated like "heroes." I heard a man on the television claim that just because a person is a homosexual, that doesn't mean that he can't be a Christian; in fact, many homosexuals are professed Christians. Where does this man get his scripture to support his view? I get mine from Leviticus 20:13: "If a man also lie with mankind as he lieth with a woman, both of them have committed an abomination. They shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them." With these words, I will drop dead in my tracks before I'll respect one of these people."

FASCINATION FOR THE FUTURE

There is an important element in the process of growing up that not all parents understand. It expresses itself in games of role-playing—the child pretends to be a grown-up in some adventurous situation.

As parents, we should realize that there is more to a child's role-playing than imagination. Actually, he is caught up in a fascination for the future. He is beholding tomorrow as a horizon of limitless opportunities. Being a brave fireman is just one possibility he'll explore.

To wise parents this fascination for the future signals the child's pressing need for religious training.

Whatever his emerging role in our complex society, his God-given potentials in moral and spiritual integrity must be developed.

One of the churches in our community should be yours. Its program of worship and Christian education offers a FOUNDATION FOR THE FUTURE. Fascination alone is tragically inadequate.

Market's decline is broad

New York (AP) — Word of a sharp drop in orders for durable goods last month helped push the stock market into a broad decline Friday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 6.15 to 938.75 on the heels of a 9.97 loss Thursday.

For the week the average eked out a 1.75 gain, while most other indicators recorded small losses.

Glamor issues turned in a mixed showing after some sharp losses on Thursday. Digital Equipment and Texas Instruments advanced about a point apiece, but Disney and McDonald's each gave up a point or more.

Auto issues weakened on the durable-goods report, with General Motors, Ford Motor, Chrysler and American Motors all chalking up fractional losses.

Drug, retail and metal issues also were generally lower. Golds and oils were mixed.

Standard Brands topped the active list, slipping nearly a point in trading marked by a 330,200-share block trade.

Northrop fell nearly 2 points on the company's report of lower third quarter profits.

Gardner-Denver, a producer of industrial equipment which also reported a quarterly earnings decline, lost more than a point.

On the upside, Gap Stores ranked among the sharpest percentage gainers for the second straight day following the company's announcement of improved quarterly profits.

The NYSE's composite com-mon-stock index fell .43 to 53.42.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index dropped .43 to 53.42.

The NYSE's composite com-mon-stock index fell .43 to 53.42.

But prices began sliding again at mid-afternoon when the Commerce Department reported a 3.1 per cent drop in new orders for durable goods by noontime.

The Dow fell some 6 points at the outset in a carryover of the selling that had set in on Thursday. After that, it steadied, trimming its loss to about 2 points by noontime.

Drug, retail and metal issues also were generally lower. Golds and oils were mixed.

Davis, LSE ramble past Millard

By Ken Hambleton
Star Sports Writer

Millard — Quarterback Ed Davis scored on a 73-yard run and passed for two more touchdowns to lead Lincoln Southeast to a 28-0 win over Millard here Friday night in an Eastern I-80 Conference game.

Davis set up the Knights' first score with a 37-yard run to the Millard 10 and on the following play, he found receiver Don Jones alone in the end zone to put Southeast ahead 6-0.

The Knights' defense held the Indians to little offensive gain and set up the next two Southeast scores.

Chuck VanWerdan picked off a Millard pass at the Southeast 22 early in the second quarter, and two plays later Davis romped around the left end for 73 yards and a touchdown.

Two plays following the kickoff, linebacker Dan Gibbons recovered a fumble when Millard quarterback Scott Story was sacked by Southeast's Robin Derr on the Millard 29-yard line.

Two runs by Larry Gilliland and two Davis passes, one to Gary Hager and one to Gilliland, moved the ball to the Indian 10. Then Rob Hansen picked off Davis' next pass at the five but the Indians were called for pass interference.

Two plays later Davis found Jones again in the end zone to make the score 21-0 at the half.

The Knights, now 5-1-2, marched 69 yards on their first possession of the second half in a drive highlighted by a 33-yard run by reserve Laird Haberlan to the Millard 16. Davis hit Hager at the two and on the next play, Haberlan dashed in for the score. Kyle Fink added his fourth consecutive kick to end the scoring.

Millard finally crossed the 50-yard line midway through the third quarter when Greg Peitzmeier recovered a fumbled punt on the LSE 42. But on the third play, LSE's Gibbons came up with an interception and returned the ball to the Knight 47.

Millard gained its only first down of the second half on the next possession but the Southeast defense held once again and stalled the Indians' on the Knight 35-yard line.

The Southeast defense allowed Millard just four first downs for the game and 62 yards total offense, with 44 of those yards coming late in the game.

Davis led the Knight offense with 117 yards rushing and 68 yards passing on seven completions.

Gilliland rushed for 66 yards on 11 carries and halfback Dan Megunnis carried 13 times for 53 yards.

Reserve halfback Dan Fischer gained 57 yards on nine carries for LSE.

I think this game is a sign of how good our offensive and defensive lines are, said LSE coach Frank Solich. Davis called a good mix of passes and runs and our offensive line provided the opportunities.

Solich also cited his defense for gaining its fourth shutout of the season and second in a row.

Nobody has really threatened us offensively in the last couple of weeks because our defense has been playing so well, he said.

Looking to the playoffs, Solich noted his team's improvement in the last three weeks.

We tied Grand Island and then beat East and now we've started putting points on the board, he said. Gaining momentum like we have is very important when you're talking about possibly gaining a playoff spot.

The Knights, currently listed as the leaders in their playoff district, host Papillion in a game at Seacrest Field next Saturday night.

Millard, now 1-7, will host South Sioux City next Wednesday to close out its season.

North Platte jolts Lincoln High, Papillion nips East, Pius X romps

Lincoln High's bid for a district football playoff spot was dealt a serious blow at North Platte Friday night when the Links fell to the Bulldogs, 12-3.

In two other games involving local high schools, No. 3 rated Pius X belted Council Bluffs St. Alberts, 33-15, and East was edged by Papillion, 7-6.

The Lincoln High-North Platte game was a tale of different halves.

In the first half, the Links had it their way, taking a 3-0 lead on an 18-yard field goal by Bryan Clark and largely dominating the offensive action.

However, Lincoln High failed to capitalize on two scoring chances in the first half, which proved crucial in the final outcome.

The Links took the opening kickoff and marched against the Bulldogs, but relinquished the ball on North Platte's 29-yard line after a fumble.

After scoring on Clark's field goal, the Links lost another scoring chance later in the second stanza when they were held on the eight-yard line of the Bulldogs on downs.

In the second half, North Platte's rushing game, held in check in the first half, got rolling.

Mounting two long, time-consuming drives in the third and fourth quarters, the Bulldogs got the two touchdowns they needed to win the contest.

In the second half, North Platte had 44 rushes with its ball control offense and Lincoln High was able to get off only 14 plays in the entire second half.

North Platte's go-ahead score came in the third quarter on a three-yard run by Gary Damelson. They crossed the goal line again in the fourth quarter on a two-yard run by Kurt O'Dell. Kicks after both scores failed.

Damelson paced North Platte's rushing attack with 104 yards in 29 carries as the Bulldogs crushed Lincoln High, 26-3.

In the Papillion East contest at Papillion, Sung Kim's point after touchdown proved the difference after Tom Walsh had scored for the Monarchs on a one-yard run in the second quarter.

Papillion's score came at the end of a 60-yard drive.

East countered with a TD on the first play of the fourth quarter.

After a short Papillion punt had been downed on the Monarchs' 33-yard line, the Spartans' Mike Borcher got the distance on the first play from scrimmage to make the game 7-6.

However, East's Jeff Keeler missed his kick to leave the Spartans one-point behind.

Earlier in the game, East lost scoring chances in the second quarter when they fumbled the ball away to Papillion on the Monarchs' five-yard line just before the half and in the third quarter when the Spartans were held on downs at the Papillion 20.

In the Pius X-Council Bluffs St. Alberts game, senior quarterback Pat Heng passed for 205 yards on 61 completions in 19 attempts to lead the Thunderbolts.

Heng hit senior wingback Mark Cooper with a 15-yard touchdown strike to open the Pius X scoring.

Cooper in the third period.

Senior I-back Mark Bruckner rushed for 106 yards on 15 carries to lead the Bolt running attack.

Although the score is misleading, it wasn't an easy victory for the Thunderbolts. Tied 7-7 late in the first half, Pius X managed to put a score on the board with just six seconds remaining in the half.

Heng scored the TD on a one-yard plunge, which was set up by a 22-yard pass to Cooper.

We had a hard time adjusting to their defense, said Pius X coach Vince Aldrich. They were in a 4-4, but would put eight men on the line on first down. So we went right away to the passing game and could pretty much pass at will, especially the sideline passes to the end and wingback, said Aldrich.

Pius X wasted no time salting the game away in the third quarter. St. Alberts' Randy Kenkel fumbled after a 58-yard gallop and Pius X recovered at their own 11. The Bolts then mounted an 89-yard drive capped by Heng's second score, a seven-yard scamper.

We wore them down, said Aldrich, referring to the Thunderbolts' 495 yards total offense. But they have a good ball club, he added.

Pius X is now 6-1 on the season and travels to Omaha Ben-on Thursday night for its final encounter with Omaha Cathedral. St. Alberts dropped to 6-1 with the loss.

Schultz, Burke champs again

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

Kearney — If Paul Schultz had been born two hours later, Nebraska's twice Class A state cross country champion from Omaha Burke might have become the state's first three-time champion next year.

If Omaha Paul VI's Jim Hall, the state Class B champion here Friday, had been born two children later, it wouldn't have made that much difference.

Hall comes from a family of 15. He has nine brothers and five sisters. He's learned to be competitive from the time he was a tot.

In leading Burke to a repeat state championship, Schultz became the second runner in Class A history to win back-to-back titles. Boys Town's Barney Hill was the first in 1972-73.

"That's quite an accomplishment for a kid who just turned 17-years-old two weeks ago," Burke coach Skip Morris said of Schultz.

"If I would have been born two hours later," Schultz pointed out, "I would have started school a year later and I'd be a junior this year. But age doesn't matter that much in cross country. It's mostly a matter of training."

With respect to training, no runner has worked harder than Hall, according to Paul VI coach Bill Gillespie.

"If you would have seen Jim run when he was a freshman," Gillespie said, "you would have laughed at him. He was the most awkward runner I've ever seen. But he comes from a family with competitive spirit. He wasn't going to let that stand in the way."

Hall has seven older brothers "and every one has made a name for himself in Paul VI athletics," Gillespie said. "They are so competitive. In practice, I even have to calm Jim down. He wants to run hard all the time."

One older brother, Tim, was Nebraska's state Class B mile champion as a junior in 1974. He did not compete in cross country. In the fall, he quarterbacked Paul VI's football team.

"I liked football, too," the 5-10, 132-pound Hall said, "but I didn't like getting hit. I was always running away from people. Cross country was my sport."

"In our family," Hall said, "you had to fight your way to the top. If you didn't, you got tortured."

Hall ran the 2.5-mile Kearney Country Club layout in 13:19. Schultz covered the course in 12:52.

"I was hoping to get the record today (12:35 by Creighton Prep's Pat Colburn two years ago)," Schultz said, "but the wind cooled me off. It was really biting out there."

Schultz, 5-7 and 130 pounds, knew Lincoln East's Brian Dunnigan, who finished second 13 seconds behind him, would be his closest challenger.

"I had beaten him by fair margins last year, so I wasn't that worried about him," Schultz said, "but I really had to pick it up to get rid of him."

Lincoln Southeast's Jay Seibold finished third, 19 seconds behind Dunnigan.

Pius X wins B title, results page 17.

Sports Digest

University of Oklahoma head coach Barry Switzer confirmed that an assistant football coach was along on an alleged spying trip when the University of California was working out at Texas Stadium, the Oklahoma City Times reported.

The paper said it also was confirmed that the assistant coach, Bill Shimek, received an $800 check from an Oklahoma City firm linked with the alleged spy, Lawrence C. Williams. Switzer said he does not believe Shimek was involved in any spying incident.

Other football

The Indiana football team received a new incentive to chalk up its first winning season since 1968 — coach Lee Corso received a new three-year contract, complete with a pay raise.

Basketball

University of Minnesota president C. Peter Magrath, a former University of Nebraska administrator, said Minnesota will go to federal court to prevent the NCAA from instituting "a new, unjustified and severe sanction" against the men's athletic program. The NCAA placed the entire male athletic program on "indefinite probation" for failing to declare three basketball players ineligible.

Pius X harriers win Class B

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

Kearney — Lincoln Pius X's charge to the state Class B cross country championship here Friday was so impressive, the Thunderbolts would have finished second in the Class A chase behind Omaha Burke with comparable times.

George O'Boyle, in his ninth year as Pius X's head coach, was too busy savoring his first state title to make comparisons with the Class A schools, however.

"This is a great group of kids," he said. "If you were going out to recruit a cross country team, I don't know how you would pick a better one. They are all champions, top notch kids and good students."

They are also competitive runners. Senior Doug Morin matched last year's fourth place finish, Junior Dwight Groth finished ninth. Senior Jeff Barry was 12th, sophomore Jerry Spethman 17th and junior Tim Duggan 42nd.

Taking their five times and inserting them into the Class A field and Pius X would have finished behind champion Omaha Burke and ahead of runnerup Scottsbluff and No. 3 Lincoln Southeast.

Of course, that's mythical. The 'Bolts were perfectly content with their 30-point total in Class B, 53 points ahead of runnerup Imperial.

"I really thought if we'd run the way we had run all season, we'd win," O'Boyle said of his unbeaten team. "Other teams seemed to drop off after their top two runners while we seemed to have four run consistently well."

It's taken time for O'Boyle to build Pius' program. The 'Bolts began to see results two years ago in a fifth place state meet finish. Last year, they were third.

"It's been the perfect mixture — three seniors, two juniors and two sophomores," O'Boyle noted. "Chris Dawson and Mark Cuddy did not run at state for us, but they've been valuable all year, too.

"In one way, it's been easy to coach this group because you just let them go out and do the job," O'Boyle said.

"But in another way," he added, "I've felt the pressure of coaching them because I felt they had so much talent, they should win."

Pius X may not field a fourth straight state Class B football champion this fall, but O'Boyle's crew finished in typical Thunderbolt style — unbeaten and state champions.

400-yard freestyle relay took the gold.

Conference records were set in seven of the events. East's Kay Stromer had a 2:05.8 time in the 200-yard freestyle and Kris Funk had a 2:19.6 time in the 200-yard individual medley.

Lincoln High's Barb Harris set a conference record in the 100-yard butterfly with a time of 57.8, which also qualified her for all-American status. Her time of :24.4 in the 50-yard freestyle is also an automatic all-American time.

"We don't have too many blue chippers," said Southeast coach Steve Nootz. "But we have a lot of desire and a well-balanced team. We get a lot of seconds, thirds and fourths and that really makes a difference."

The 100 and 500-yard freestyle events were the key events for the Knights, with Ann Rinne, Denise Houchens and Pam Keester taking the top three places in the 500 and Deb McCall and Janice Cipriano second and third in the 100-yard event.

"Our depth is in freestyle," Nootz said. "We qualified four for the finals of the 100 and that really helped."

The depth was necessary, as LSE won just three of the 11 events. Rinne took the 500-yard freestyle, Kelly Arntzen won the 100-yard breaststroke and the 400-yard freestyle relay took the gold.

The alarm sounded around noon during the diving preliminaries. The Lincoln Fire Department responded to the alarm and the swimmers were forced to stand outside for about 15 minutes with temperatures in the mid-40s.

Grand Island, which has surprised many teams this year, including giving East a scare early in the season, has mostly sophomores and juniors on the team coached by Joe Stecher.

"These kids have all been through age-group swimming and it really shows," the first-year coach said. "We thought we had a chance to win this since we'd be breaking up some points, but we couldn't quite do it."

Unlike Grand Island, the Southeast squad is mostly seniors. Nootz noted that the Knights would be hurt by graduation, "but these seniors really wanted to get back after the dual loss to East. This is going to be a tough year at the state meet. I think you'd have to favor Westside, but it's going to be nip and tuck. We'll be in there and so will East, Grand Island and Bellevue, and all the individual swimmers that can switch things around fast."

Southeast finished with 94, while East was second with 80 and Grand Island 61. Lincoln High had 24, Northeast had 19 and Hastings had eight points.

Royalty named at Ak-Sar-Ben

Omaha — William F. Fitzgerald and Karen Ann Scott were crowned as the 82nd King and Queen of Ak-Sar-Ben during ceremonies in Omaha Friday night.

Miss Scott, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott, Jr., of Omaha, is a senior at Trinity College in San Antonio, Tex., where she is majoring in elementary education with a specialty in language and learning disabilities. Friday's ceremony was the first the 21-year-old had ever seen in person, although her family has been active in Ak-Sar-Ben for several years.

Mrs. Scott served on the Women's Ball Committee from 1967 through '69. Sisters Sandra and Amy and brother David all served as Pages. An aunt, Virginia Falk Olson, was a Princess in 1963. Mr. Scott has been a member of the Board of Governors since 1973 and has served on His Majesty's Council.

Queen Karen is on the Dean's list and a member of Spur, at Trinity, as well as Kappa Delta Pi, education honorary; Mu Phi Epsilon, national music society, and the Association for Childhood Education.

Fitzgerald, 68, is chairman of the board of Commercial Federal Savings and Loan Association and has missed only one coronation in the past 40 years. A graduate of Iowa State University in 1931, Fitzgerald has served with the firm since 1932.

In 1934 he was named assistant secretary to the company, a post he held until 1942 when he became secretary. In 1950 he became president, in 1974 he was made chairman of the board. His son, William A., succeeded him as president.

Commercial Federal had assets of slightly more than $2 million in 1934. Today, the company is recognized as the leading innovator in the field with assets of more than $800 million. It is the largest financial institution in the state and the 61st largest in the United States.

Fitzgerald's father was a long-time Ak-Sar-Ben member. His sister was a Princess in the late 20's, his daughter was a Princess in 1957 and is now a member of the Women's Ball Committee. His youngest daughter, Katherine Grandaert, was a Page in 1951 and a Princess in 1964. His son is a Councillor of Ak-Sar-Ben.

York, Gretna schools contest state

The York and Gretna School Districts filed two separate lawsuits in Lancaster County District Court Friday seeking revocation of an order of the State Board of Education.

Both school districts state that they were penalized financially for hiring uncertified teachers under a State Board of Education ruling on Sept. 24, 1976.

Both school districts claim they were unaware that the teachers were not certified.

The order from the board of education is "arbitrary and capricious," is contrary to and unsupported by the evidence, the lawsuits state.

Old West Trail Foundation officers elected

The foundation promotes tourism in the five-state region of Nebraska, Wyoming, Montana and the Dakotas.

Other officers elected were vice president, Allen Donahue, Great Falls, Mont.; secretary, Kenneth Wright, Lakewood, Colo.; and treasurer, William E. Ramsey, Omaha.

The election of Robert Helmer, a general agent for State Farm Insurance, came during the foundation's annual meeting in Omaha.
